Market Overview

In the second quarter of 2019, the market was on a roller-coaster ride, struggling to process trade issues, Federal Reserve (Fed) commentary and slowing economic growth to find a support level. The drawdown in May was followed by a solid rebound in June, resulting in a strong finish to the quarter, albeit with heightened volatility.

Portfolio Performance

The Segall Bryant & Hamill Small Cap Value Dividend portfolio appreciated 2.0%* for the second quarter, ahead of the 1.4% return of the Russell 2000® Value Index. Stocks with more defensive attributes such as dividend payers, low leverage, higher operating returns and larger market capitalizations outperformed the benchmark, providing a tailwind for our strategy. Although value remained out of favor with growth continuing its multi-quarter trend of outperformance, the portfolio bested the benchmark for the quarter, due to Selection effect.

Contributors to Return

Sectors that contributed most to relative performance in the quarter were Real Estate, Consumer Staples and Communication Services. One of the top contributors from an individual stock perspective was Financial holding Washington Federal, Inc. (WAFD), a leading northwest thrift that has been organically growing its bank-like products and balance sheet. The company reported solid first quarter results in April as lower interest rates drove mortgage lending and helped contribute to a positive funding spread. Ensign Group, Inc. (ENSG), an operator of skilled nursing and assisted living facilities, was another top contributor in the quarter. The company has continued to execute on its strategy of acquiring underperforming skilled nursing facilities and applying their management expertise to improve their performance.

Detractors from Return

Sectors that detracted most from relative performance in the quarter were Industrials, Utilities and Energy. Energy holding Range Resources Corporation (RRC), a natural gas focused exploration and production company operating primarily in Pennsylvania in the Marcellus shale, suffered during the quarter despite strong operational performance as a weak natural gas price environment, driven by global macro-economic fears, pressured energy stocks. American Eagle Outfitters, Inc. (AEO), a specialty retailer of apparel and accessories for men and women, was the biggest individual detractor in the quarter despite reporting strong results. The stock retreated in reaction to slightly lower second quarter guidance as the company anticipates a more promotional environment, a result of weak first quarter performance by competitors.

Outlook and Positioning

The market has struggled to make progress since the fall of last year as slowing growth, heightened trade tensions and an extended economic cycle have kept a lid on earnings growth and multiple expansion. The market ended the second quarter on a high note, driven by the expectation that central banks will intervene to prevent a market correction. If so, the portfolio is well positioned as small-cap dividend-paying stocks have historically outperformed when the Fed has cut interest rates. Our focus on quality dividend-paying stocks that are attractively valued has served clients well in periods of heightened uncertainty such as this, and we believe it will continue to do so in the future.
